Summary

- It is notoriously difficult to adapt an artistic occupation to a general social security system. The same difficulties apply in all countries.
- The 2015 inquiry suggests that actual income before your sickleave, shall determine the size of your compensation. All your separate employments, regardless of duration, shall count.
- The 2015 inquiry does not take into account that about 80-90 percent of the visual artists run a small proprietorship, and will therefore not benefit from this improvement.

Social and economic reality of visual artists

- Visual artists work an average of 47 hours per week (134 percent of full time)
- Visual artists have a taxed median income of 15 000 EUR per year.
- The more time you put into your artistic work, the lower your income.
- Less than 10 percent of the visual artists make more than 3 200 EUR per month.
- 64 percent of the visual artists make less than 1 300 EUR per month.

Social and economic reality of visual artists

- 70 percent don't get any economic compensation when caring for sick children.
- 50 percent don't get any economic compensation when they are sick themselves.
- 67 percent aren't covered by an unemployment benefit.

Will the 2015 enquiry improve the welfare of visual artists?

- Artists with an incorporated company - yes
- Artists with many short employments - yes
- Artists with a small proprietorship (80-90 percent) - no
- Artists with short or long term government grants - no

Amendments to 2015 social security enquiry

- The enquiry should be completed to incorporate small businesses/proprietorships.
- Your income should be taken into account regardless of its origin.
- An artistic business should be permitted to a larger extent during unemployment benefits.
- Government grants and scholarships should be taken in to account when determining the size of your social security benefits.

Amendments to 2015 social security enquiry

- Give artistic small businesses a tax reduction to a breaking point at about 20 000 EUR per year.
- Allow artistic small businesses a social security benefit based on their gross income to a breaking point at about 20 000 EUR.
- Give the social insurance offices an assignment to raise their capacity and competence on the field of artistic enterprises.

Social security for visual artists

Amendment of the Swedish public inquiry on social security and welfare,
SOU 2015:21

Visual artists don't expect any favours, but demand equal social security benefits as everybody else.
